

The second week of our 'What a Wonderful World' term was a joy. We always prioritise reading at BHI but, for our special book week, reading was celebrated in every class, every day.

Our special library space was in constant use: each class had a book bistro, with children selecting from a drinks, snack and book menu before settling down to a good read. All classes also paired up with junior classes: EYFS with year six; year one with year fours, and year two with year fives - it was lovely to welcome BHI pupils back and our BHI children very much enjoyed hearing and sharing some additional stories. Thank you to BHI; we loved it!

Teachers also shared favourite books in assemblies and of course on Thursday, to celebrate 'World Book Day', children came to school dressed as a character from a favourite book. We were all completely amazed by the costumes, complete with impressive props, across the school. Alongside classics, such as Matilda, Tabby McCat or The Tiger Who Came to Tea, there were more recent characters, such as Dogman, Looshkin and Dinosaurs in Pants, with several children also inspired by the 'Little People, Big Dreams' series: Elton John, Taylor Swift and Mae Jemison among others. The children all had an opportunity to see each others' costumes in a special assembly and were brilliant at identifying the characters. After school, we welcomed children back for bedtime stories. Thank you to all the teachers for giving up your time and to the Friends of School for organising refreshments for both children and parents (as well as the book bingo challenge).

Finally, a HUGE thank you to Miss Lee for organising such a fantastic and busy book week, which benefitted children across the school.
